4 WAYS TO BUY FIRST

1 Buy first, list later

Carry both homes for a short time, move into the new one, then sell the old one on your schedule.

Best if your income comfortably covers both payments.

2 HELOC on your current home

Borrow against your equity for the down payment. Nexa HELOCs: $5K–$1M, FICO as low as 600.

Open it before you list. Variable rate; your home secures the line.

Text James about a HELOC →

3 Bridge loan

A short-term loan on your current home that covers the new down payment. Typically about 6–12 months.

Higher rate, and two payments for a short time.

4 Recast after you sell

When the old home sells, put the proceeds toward your new loan and ask for a lower, recalculated payment.

Availability and fees depend on your loan and lender.

Your options, in more detail

Buy first and move once. Not sure which path fits? Call or text Terry or James.

FOUR WAYS TO BUY FIRST

OPTION 1 • BOTH HOMES

Buy first, list later

If your income can comfortably carry both payments, you may qualify with both homes on the books and use savings for the down payment — no bridge loan needed.

✓ Upside: One move, on your timeline.

⚠ Keep in mind: You carry both housing payments until your old home sells. Terry can help plan the timing and the sale.

OPTION 2 • EQUITY LINE

HELOC on your current home

Open a home equity line of credit before you list, draw what you need for the down payment, then pay it off when your current home sells. Nexa HELOCs range from $5K to $1M, with FICO scores as low as 600.

✓ Upside: Flexible — you only draw what you need.

⚠ Keep in mind: It must be in place before the home goes on the market. Most HELOCs have a variable rate, your home secures the line, and a lender can freeze it if your home's value drops (per the CFPB).

OPTION 3 • LOAN

Bridge loan

A short-term loan against your current home that covers the down payment on the new one. It typically runs about 6–12 months and is paid off when your old home sells.

✓ Upside: Make a strong offer with no home-sale contingency.

⚠ Keep in mind: Rates run higher, and you carry two payments for a short time. Plan how it will be repaid.

OPTION 4 • AFTER THE SALE

Recast after you sell

When your old home sells, you can put the proceeds toward your new loan and ask your lender about a recalculated payment.

✓ Upside: May lower your monthly payment after the sale.

⚠ Keep in mind: Availability and fees depend on your loan type and lender.

WHICH OPTION FITS YOU?

You have solid equity and want one short-term loan from a local lender
→ Bridge loan
Higher rate and a short term — plan how it will be repaid.

You'd like flexible access to equity before you list
→ HELOC
Open it before listing. Variable rate; the home secures the line.

Your income comfortably carries both payments
→ Buy first, list later
Use savings for the down payment — no bridge loan needed.

You want a lower payment once your old home sells
→ Recast
Availability and fees depend on your loan type and lender.

HOW IT WORKS

1 Talk
- Terry plans your timing and the sale of your current home.
- James reviews your financing options.

2 Choose
- Compare each option's costs and risks, not just the rate, and pick the path that fits your budget and timeline.
- Want a HELOC? Open it before you list.

3 Move once
- Buy your next home and move in.
- Sell your old home on your schedule.
- Pay off any HELOC or bridge loan from the sale; ask about a recast.
